TWO NEW TEXTBOOKS

The Financial Organization of Society

By HAROLD G. MOULTON

Associate Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago

THIS book is designed to serve as the basis of a one quarter or a semester survey course in finance, as a prerequisite to all of the advanced specialized courses, such as Money, Prices, and the Cost of Living; Advanced Banking Theory; International Financial Problems; Business Cycles; etc.

It is believed that such a survey course in finance is indispensable, particularly for business students. Modern business has its setting in the midst of a financial system upon which it is at all times dependent in many ways; and the business man needs to know the relation of his business to all phases of the financial system, not to a single aspect merely, such as the commercial bank. This volume marks a pioneer attempt to reorganize the financial curriculum and to develop the study of finance in a systematic manner.

Principles of Accounting

By ALBERT C. HODGE and J. O. MCKINSEY

of the School of Commerce and Administration in the University of Chicago

A survey course for one quarter or for one semester, designed to give the prospective business manager:

1. An idea of the type of service provided by accounting as a measuring aid in business control;
2. A working knowledge of the fundamental principles underlying the gathering, analysis, and interpretation of accounting data;
3. A knowledge of the technique employed in gathering accounting data and in preparing accounting reports.

Examination copies will gladly be sent upon request, to be retained free for desk use if eventually adopted as class texts.
